

Theoretical and Historical Perspectives on Global Governance

Course Guide

Fall Semester 2025

The course covers the concepts of global governance and global policy making along with theory and research that apply these concepts to study the governance of complex global problems. These complex global problems are revolutionizing policy making by generating new domains of public action beyond the nation-state. Thus, the course covers literature and topics that support a problem-oriented approach to global governance and global policy making. In addition, the course identifies and critically analyzes the various actors, institutions and regimes involved in global governance and global policy making.

Organization of the course

Below you will find a description of 1) course material and 2) course formats

I. Course Material. Course lectures cover major theoretical themes, issue areas and actors relevant to global governance and global policy making. In addition to lectures, students must participate in seminars. Seminars expose students to key challenges across a range of issue areas that illicit critical engagement with understanding and developing governance in a globalizing world. Students will be challenged to consider how events and actors, each with their own interests, ideas and worldviews, interact to bring about intended and unintended outcomes. Finally, the course gives students the opportunity to participate in a simulated exercise on global governance, a UN role-play.

II. Details on Course Formats: students will have a combination of both lecture-format and seminar-format days.

1. The lecture days - will be days where all students in the course will meet at the same time and cover a given topic in the course via lecture. All lecture days have material students need to read or review before the lecture. This is stipulated by lecture topics covered below. If slides were used by a teacher during their lecture, they will be subsequently uploaded onto Canvas.
2. The seminar days (please also see detailed seminar instructions also uploaded on Canvas)- During this course, there are 6 seminar days during the term (4 topic seminar days and 2 seminar days for the UN Role Play) in which you are divided into 3 small groups. As opposed to the large lectures, these days are led by a presenting group of students and are oriented toward discussion, critique and debate about the readings. Thus, the seminars are 'student focused' (as opposed to 'teacher focused') and, therefore, the quality of the seminar depends largely on you. This, of course, means we ask each of you to come prepared to participate by discussing and critiquing the assigned readings.

-In the first topic seminar, SDG SEMINAR (S1), you will participate in a group presentation that applies global policy making to an SDG goal and you will engage in discussion based on presentations. When preparing your presentation, feel free to use PowerPoint or similar visual media. Your SDG presentations should be about 15 minutes in length. In addition to the SDG Seminar, throughout the term, each of you will write a seminar paper and participate in a group presentation and organization for one of the topic seminar sessions on The Influence of NGOs in Global Policy Making (S2), State Interests and the Promotion of Human Rights in the HRC (S3) and Norms and the Local Adoption of Global Standards? (S6). Each seminar paper should be 2000-2,500 words long and address the research problems dealt with in the assigned readings and the findings/conclusions reached. You should focus on analysis rather than a description of the literature. Evaluative analysis must be based on solid arguments and examples from the literature or other relevant sources. In addition to writing your individual papers, each of you will participate in a group presentation that combines the perspectives of your seminar papers at the same seminar session. When preparing your presentation, feel free to use PowerPoint or similar visual media. Please keep each presentation to about 30 minutes in length. In addition to the group presentation, the presenters will also be responsible for structuring the rest of the seminar discussion. The presenters should therefore also prepare discussion questions and be ready to lead discussions with those in attendance at the seminar. It is therefore extremely important that everyone do the readings for each seminar session, even if you are not presenting. The reading list for the seminars is found below. The seminar papers are due at 9am the day of the seminars. More detailed instructions on seminar groups and paper writing, presenting and leading are provided in documents on canvas at the start of the course.

-For the UN Role Play seminars (S4, S5), you will write a country position paper and self-reflection paper. More detailed instructions for the Role Play will be presented and there will be a document provided on this on Canvas.

-A lecture on academic writing will be held on 3/9. Attendance is mandatory.

Learning outcomes

After completing the course, the students will:

- be able to analyze theoretical approaches in global governance by critically assessing their applicability to current global governance challenges;
- be able to identify the roles of the principal institutions, organizations and actors for global policy making in the contemporary international arena;
- have an understanding of the actors that make up transnational policy communities and the new domains of public action beyond the nation-state in which they engage in their global policy making efforts;
- research, represent and negotiate a country's position in developing global policy in response to a complex global problem.

Literature:

See the list of mandatory and supplementary literature for the course under readings for lectures and seminars below.

Course requirements and grading

The course grade will be on the Swedish grading scale of Pass (G), High Pass (VG), or Fail (U). Students will be graded on the following:

- I. Final exam (take home)
The final exam will be a take home exam in which students must answer (using Microsoft Word format) two questions out of four questions. Make-up exams are given for any students who receive a failing grade on the final exam.
- II. UN Role Play & Assignment (participation & writing assignment)
- III. Seminar paper
- IV. Presentations and seminar attendance (credit).

The course grade builds on the final exam, the UN role play oral and written components, as well as the seminar paper. In order to receive the grade Pass, you must pass all of the individual assignments and receive credit for the two presentations and attending all seminars. In order to receive a High Pass for the course, you must receive the grade High Pass on two out of the three individual assignments and pass and receive credit for the rest.

- V. Seminar attendance and presentation (G/U) – It is mandatory that all students attend and come prepared to discuss the literature even when they do not have to present that day. Missing a seminar must be compensated with extra work for credit. It is also mandatory that students' present on their assigned seminar. Missing to present must be compensated with extra work for credit.

*If you miss the seminars, your seminar presentation or the UN role play for any reason and you would like to receive credit, you may do a supplementary assignment. Please see the additional documents on these assignments on Canvas for further information on the possible makeup assignments.

The students are expected to familiarize themselves with the course material listed for each lecture and seminar in advance.

Course Academic Integrity

An attempt to deceive during examinations means that a student has attempted to give an impression of their performance in a written exam or some of form of assessment that is not true. That is what is commonly referred to as cheating, or attempting to cheat. There are different kinds of attempts to deceive, such as plagiarism, prohibited aids and prohibited collaboration. Deception can also take other forms.

- Plagiarism means that a student has presented someone else's text or other material as if it were their own text or material.
- Prohibited aid means that a student has used aids, including AI, that were not permitted according to the instructions.
- Prohibited collaboration means that students have collaborated with each other in breach of the instructions.

Plagiarism: Copying material from the Internet, from books, journals, reports, or from a fellow student and then presenting it as one's own is strictly forbidden! Plagiarism is theft of someone else's work and will result in immediate fail of the assignment. Please note that the inclusion of a source in a bibliography list is not in itself sufficient attribution of another's work. In addition, unless it is a proper citation with a reference, any direct copying of text is forbidden. All submitted student work is screened with a program called Ouriginal, which compares a student's written work with published materials (including everything published on the internet) and all the work from prior students, to detect plagiarism. The material you have read and based your arguments and factual statements on should always be referenced using proper referencing technique. More information on references and how to avoid plagiarism can be found here:

<https://studentportal.gu.se/english/help-and-guidance/search-read-write/reference-management-and-plagiarism>

Prohibited aid: All your submitted texts should be your own original writing, and not written by someone else or generated by AI. Unless there are specific instructions for the use of AI for an assignment, it should not be used and presented as your own text. The use of any tools to cheat during on campus exams (e.g. DISA) is also strictly forbidden.

Prohibited collaboration: students can discuss their work, but individual submissions must be your own original writing, and hence not too similar the work of others. Be extra careful to avoid using common notes from such collaborations.

Any kind of cheating on examinations is considered a serious offence. Proved or suspected cheating will be reported to the Disciplinary Committee of the University of Gothenburg, in accordance with the procedure of disciplinary matters at the department of political science.

The consequences may be severe for a student if found guilty. A student may be suspended from classes and campus for a determined time-period (from 3 weeks to half a year), which will result in a temporary suspension of all financial aid (including CSN) and may jeopardize a student's residence permit status. More information on disciplinary matters, including plagiarism and its consequences, can be found here: <https://studentportal.gu.se/english/study-environment-and-rules/disciplinary-matters/>

Historical and Theoretical Foundations of Forced Migration Governance: Overlapping and Fractured Principals and Systems KK

Questions lecture will address: What is global migration governance? What are the most important international organizations and legislations governing global migration? How is a migrant different than a refugee? Who are forced migrants and where do they come from? What are the EUs policies towards forced migrants? How have EU and the West's policies towards refugees shifted over time?
