

SK2211 Performance of Democracy Course Report 2022

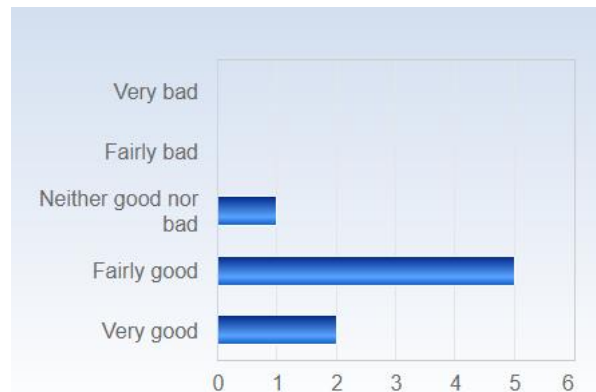

No changes were made to the course this year compared to last year. 8 students completed the course evaluation on which this course report is based. All aspects of the course were rated fairly good or very good by a majority of students. This is an improvement over last year and may reflect that the course was not held on distance. In responses to other questions, the majority of students spent about 31-40 hours on coursework per week and the majority of students found the amount of work they were requested to carry out was about right.

There were very few open-ended responses from the students. Among the more detailed, constructive comments were the following. There were some suggestions that the section of the course on corruption was a bit advanced in terms of assumptions of students' familiarity with concepts in the lectures and literatures. In addition, one student suggested that "the final paper seminar would be better if all the students were allowed to submit their proposals on Casnvas for everyone to read. Then the students would be able to prepare better for the seminar and it would be of benefit for all the students because of more and better feed-back." We will take these comments into consideration in course planning next year.

Below graphs are included that summarize the students' responses in their evaluations.
